Role A:

You are a computer expert, so you ask your partner to do the report in computer.

1. Decide which animal you would like to do.
2. Share with your partner the topic you would do and choose one from you two.
3. Develop a conversation beginning with choosing the topic.

A situation for you to solve:

You will try to put everything (pictures, photos, recording files, films) requested by your partner into your report. However, the recording file or film is too big. How will you respond to your partner?

Role B:

You don't know how to do a report in computer, but your partner can do it. You are responsible to get photos, picture, audio files, or film for your report.

1. Decide which animal you would like to do.
2. Share with your partner the topic you would do and choose one from you two.
3. Develop a conversation beginning with choosing the topic.

A situation for you to solve:

You found some resources (pictures, photos, or films) on line and also use your cell phone to record or film. You would like to know how many you need to take and if all these files can be put into your report, especially the audio file or film.
